

Writing competition

With a sprinkle of inspiration, little ideas can grow into big ideas.

READ
GROW
Inspire

Write a short story about your best idea ever.

The Littlest Inventor

I awoke from my deep sleep full of excitement. I had dreamed about my latest and greatest idea. I often dream of new inventions or solutions to problems that I am having with my ideas. My name is Meraki. My parents chose that name because it means doing something with love and creativity. I always put my whole heart into everything that I do.

I live in the countryside with my parents, and we are quite isolated, so I don't go to school. I have a lot of spare time that I use to invent things. I have a special shed out the back to create my new inventions in. Sometimes I get so many fantastic ideas that I find it difficult to write them all down.

I have been described as an exceptional kid inventor and I have been awarded several impressive prizes for my creations. I regard my latest invention as my best idea ever. I am designing a robot to be my friend and inventing assistant because I was terribly lonely being an only child. Unfortunately, I was having trouble programming the robot to understand how to be my friend.

In my dream I realised it would take many hours of difficult coding and it might not be possible to have a robotic friend just yet. Whilst I continue to work on my robotic friend, I'm also excited to think