"Dream, dream, dream, I hope my dream can come true", thought Amelia. Amelia is a curious girl who lives in a poor village and always dreamt of having a huge library with many interesting books for her to read. She wants to know more about the world. Everyone appears sad and Amelia hopes one day she can change the living standards of the village.

On a rainy day, an old woman holding a wooden brown walking stick is walking carefully but trips over the crack in the ground and falls in a slippery, wet puddle. Amelia ran as fast as a cheetah towards the woman to help her get up on her two feet. Amelia realises that she was holding a colourful umbrella and she lends it to the old woman. "Thank you young girl. Here is a magic box for your kindness, you can only make one wish", the woman said. "Thank you", Amelia replied.

Her wish was to have a library in the village and her wish came true. All the children and adults loved the library. The village was finally as happy as can be.
