My best idea ever would be to make the Earth a better place and helping people in need. We will improve transport, health care, food, and the environment, so that everyone can have a happy life.

To improve transport for everyone, we will invent portals so everyone can go wherever they need to go quickly. Portals are cheap and they don't take up much space, and they don't make pollution.

Healthcare will be free for everyone, and we will put more money into studying diseases so we can find new treatments and cures.

We will make farms to grow food and make sure we only grow crops that are good for the environment. We will eliminate plastic packaging on food and use food banks to reduce food waste and make sure everyone has what they need.

Last of all, we will set up foundations to study and help bring extinct creatures back to the living world, and to help endangered animals grow in number.

We will need lots of money to do this. My plan to get the money is to take it from the really rich people. We will send the rich people to space and give them each one planet to live on. They will be given a big house and every month they will get a massive food supply of their choice. To convince them to want to do this, I will let them be the only people living in space, so they will think they're special.

These ideas are important because they will allow the Earth and its creatures will be able to survive for longer and have healthy lives.
