Fly Coka Soarist

General Classification

Did you know the Fly Coka Soarist has night vision used to travel from its home to the berry bushes it eats from without worrying about time. The Fly Coka Soarist is an elegant species that is a cross between a peacock, dog, camel and chicken.

Habitat

You will find this majestic creature in large forests. The reason you might not have seen one, is almost none of the ~~animals~~ ^{forests} are big enough for a home there for there only twenty eight of them left. They have small tree houses that are near a water ~~source~~ ^{sets} source and near a berry bush.

Appearance

This rarely unique creature can grow up to be about two metres tall! They come in the colours blue, brown, purple and white. Their wingspan is about the size of your car imagine that! They are known for their tails that both males and females have, it is a rainbow feathered tail which helps them remember the way home. Some may get

This magical creature mixed up with a blue ~~horse~~^{pegasus} because its four legged, it has hoofs, it has a tail (that's feathered), it has wings and it has eyes, but the cannot explain why the tail is feathered, why does it have fur like a dog and why does it have a beak and a crest.

Diet

The fly Coka Soarist is a ~~veg~~herbivore that mainly eats berries occasionally with a side of carrot, cucumbers or oranges.
